The shall ball given by the cadets of the Staunton Military Academy in their armory Monday night will long be remembered by the merry, light-hearted, and nimble-footed participants. The large armory-hall was brilliantly decked with streamers, bunting, and flags, while the crossed swords and artistically-arranged guns and bayonets breathed a military spirit that would have inspired Rudvard Kipling to the preduction of another Barrack-Room Ballad, Beautiful women from almost every southern State were present. It verily looked as if every "queen rose in the southern rosebud garden" of girls had been gathered together on this occasion, and the soldierly cadets made a most admirable appearance. A dainty and sumptuas supper was served. Among the ladies on the floor were noticed: Miss Westmoreland, Greenville, S. C.; Miss Mamie Dver, New Orleans; Miss Pace, Danville; Miss Tate, Roanoke; Miss Lilla Bridges, Hancock, edd.; Miss Mary Preston Graham, Lexington, and Misses Bettie Fauntleroy, Emma Hoge, Hattie Encheberger, Anne McGill, Fauntleroy, May Crowle, Sadie Van Lear, Minnie McCoy, Mary Keblinger, Anne McGill, Fauntleroy, May Crowle, Sadie Van Lear, Minnie McCoy, Mary Keblinger, Anne Belle Timberlake, Satie Miller, Mary Mcrton, Fay Taylor, Florence Elder, Bessie McCue, Nela Fowle, Linder Bumgardner, Mamie Edmondson, Mattle Wayt, Eula Keblinger, and Mattie Christian. the monutain and were soon engaged in a deadly fight. I took up my gun and climbed up the mountain for the purpose of assisting the dogs and in the hope of saving them from being torn to pieces. When I reached the summt of the krantz a number of baboons; fled. I fired and wounded one in the shoulder; he was immediately pursued and tackled by the only dog left, the others having been torn to pieces. The struggle for life or death was taking place between the wounded baboon and the dog on the very brink of a precipice. I had not another cartridge for my gun, so I put it down and picked up a couple of large stones and walked to within a few yards of the spot.

I was just in the act of hurling one of them at the baboon—the largest I have seen—came straightat me in a bold and defiant manner, his eyes gleaming with anger and his huge jaws working together as it in anticipation of the crunching that was in store for me. I just had time to hurl the stone in my now upraised hand at him when he was upon me. He seized me by the leg first, and bit me with such violence that I thought every bone in my leg was smashed to atoms. I kicked with all my might. I tried to get hold of a stone. I was wondering how all this was going to end, when one of the dogs that had been wounded in the fight, and had recovered sufficiently to make his way to where we were, seized the animal from behind. I feit the brute wished to get at the dog. He threw himself from me upon the dog: they had one rough-and-tumble, and then the baboon walked suitlenly away along the ridge of the precipice, looking back from time to time as if undecided whether he should renew the attack. It was some time before I could recover sufficient strength to descend the mountain. I got home, however, and the dog, too, after an encounter such as I shall never forget, and the like of which I hope never to experience again.
